But how do you know which Moka Pot size is right for you and your kitchen?Generally, a Moka Pot's cup size should match the number of people sharing the coffee. For example, a 3-cup Moka Pot should be used when making coffee for three people. But, keep in mind that a Moka Pot cup is about 2 oz, so if you prefer larger cups of coffee, it will reduce the servings available.Taking this into account, you should get a Moka Pot that's large enough to serve every coffee drinker in your house. But what are the different Moka Pot sizes available?And what should you do if you need to prepare coffee for more or less people than usual?Keep reading to find out!What Are The Different Sizes Of Moka PotsBialetti is the original inventor of the Moka Pot and their classic brewer comes in 5 different sizes.However, Bialetti also sells a Brikka version of their Moka Pot that comes in two different sizes. Contrary to the classic Moka Pot, the Brikka has a pressure valve embedded that increases the pressure created inside the Moka Pot.This increased pressure makes the coffee more foamy and intense.Besides Bialetti, there are several other Moka Pot brands available. Some of these brands, such as Zulay Kitchen or Grosche, have sizes that Bialetti doesn't have the 5-cup Moka Pot or 10-cup Moka Pot.So, which sizes are available? Pretty much any size you want! But if Bialetti doesn't have the size you want, you may have to find another brand that does.Why Does Moka Pot Size Matter?It's important to choose the right Moka Pot size because of 2 factors.to brew the best coffee, a Moka Pot should be filled to capacity.It's best to drink Moka Pot coffee within minutes after brewingMoka Pots Should Be Filled To CapacityMoka Pots are designed to have the correct water-to-coffee ratio. So, filling it to capacity will give you the best brewing results.This is why choosing the correct Moka Pot size for yourself is so important; because you'll have to brew the same amount every time you want a cup of coffee.It's Best To Drink Your Coffee FreshBy choosing the correct size Moka Pot, you'll ensure that you brew the perfect amount of coffee every time.By contrast, if you get a Moka Pot that's too big, you'll constantly end up with extra coffee. And coffee loses much of its flavor minutes after brewing, so you'll either end up throwing it out or drinking a lot of inferior coffee Can You Buy A Large Moka Pot And Make Smaller Amounts Of Coffee With It?A Moka Pot should be filled to capacity for every brew. Filling it halfway will result in uneven extraction, a lower brew temperature, and a larger portion of the water remaining in the Moka Pot.(If you want to read more about this, take a look at our post "Can You Half Fill A Moka Pot?")However, no matter which size Moka Pot you buy, it won't work for all situations. For example, a 6-cup Moka Pot may be perfect for you and your family, but what happens if you're the only one that wants coffee?When that happens, you'll either drink way more coffee than you should, or you'll have leftover coffee.Instead of trying to brew small amounts of coffee in a large Moka Pot, the best option is to buy a smaller Moka Pot.Related PostsHow To Pick The Right Moka Pot Size For Me?In general, I'd recommend a 6-cup Moka Pot for couples that like multiple servings of coffee. For a single person, a 3-cup Moka Pot should work well.Personally, we have a 6-cup Moka Pot for two people. And we always have some leftover because we add a lot of milk and don't like the coffee too strong.If you want to figure out which size will work best for you, there are a few questions you'll need to consider.How many cups of espresso-style coffee will my household drink daily?Do you drink multiple cups of coffee in a short amount of time?How strong do you like your Moka Pot coffee?Do you prepare coffee for everyone at the same time or do people in your house prepare their own coffee?By considering the habits of the coffee drinkers in your house, you should be able to choose the perfect size of Moka Pot.How Can I Tell What My Moka Pot Size Is?You may have gotten a Moka Pot from family or friends and you're not quite sure what size it is.To figure it out, take your Moka Pot's bottom chamber and fill it with water up to the safety valve. Then pour the water from your Moka Pot into a measuring cup to see how many ounces there are.2 oz of water = 1 cup Moka Pot6 oz of water = 3 cup Moka Pot12 oz of water = 6 cup Moka Pot18 oz of water = 9 cup Moka PotSo, as a general rule, every 2 oz of water equals 1 Moka Pot "cup".What Can You Do With Leftover Coffee?Despite your best efforts, there may be times when you end up with extra Moka Pot coffee. Either your Moka Pot was too big, or you drank more coffee than you anticipated.If this happens, don't leave your coffee sitting out. Your best option is to seal it and store it in the fridge for later.And while the coffee won't be as fresh, it will still be good.(To read more about this, check out our post "Can You Put Hot Coffee In A Fridge?")Key TakeawaysOne Moka Pot cup is about the same as one espresso-sized coffee.Choosing the right size Moka Pot is important because you have to brew a full pot every timeBialetti is the most popular brand and their classic Moka Pot comes in 5 sizesCheers Coffee Lovers!KEEP READINGShare on FacebookTweetFollow us Ready to level up your coffee-making experience?If you've been to coffee shops and love the buzz and rich flavors of espresso, but can't justify the expense or space requirements of an espresso machine, you should definitely consider the marvelous moka pot. Now, Does the size of Moka Pot matter?Moka Pot Sizes ComparisonMoka pot sizes are listed in "cups." These are NOT the size of the typical cup of coffee. Each "cup" is equivalent to approximately 60 ml, or 2 fluid ounces. That's about the volume of a shot of espresso.A couple of quick notes. Regardless of the size of moka pot you choose, don't expect your coffee to taste just like espresso. To have success with coffee from a moka pot, you need to fill the coffee filter compartment with grounds that are a little more coarse than espresso. Some people recommend filling the lower chamber with hot water as well, so the coffee doesn't get over-extracted. "Tamping down" or compressing the grounds in the filter compartment is a matter of taste, so experiment and see what you like best!Now that that's out of the way, let's move on to the different sizes of moka pot.When you're shopping for a moka pot, you'll find five primary sizes: 1-cup, 3-cup, 6-cup, 9-cup, and 12-cup.In terms of volume, that translates approximately to:1-cup: 60 ml or 2 fl oz3-cup: 200 ml or 6½ fl oz6-cup: 300 ml or 10 fl oz9-cup: 550 ml or 18½ fl oz12-cup: 775 ml or 25 fl ozWhat size Moka pot should I get?The answer to this question depends on your specific needs. In the simplest terms: you need one cup per serving of coffee you plan to brew daily. But beyond that, it gets a bit more complex. Choosing the correct size of moka pot can help save you trouble and precious storage space in your kitchen.Read on to see our recommendations for the best moka pot sizes for each kind of coffee drinker (and household of coffee drinkers).The 1-cup Moka potAs mentioned above, the 1-cup moka pot makes approximately 60 ml of coffee. It takes up the least space of all the moka pot sizes, at 13 cm or 5 inches tall.The 1-cup size is ideal for individuals who only drink one cup of coffee a day. It's also great for people who like to make each cup individually many hours apart (say, one at 7am and one at 2pm).Another wonderful use for the 1-cup moka pot is for cooking. Recipes that call for a shot of espresso or a cup of strong coffee are perfect candidates for using a 1-cup moka pot.As you can imagine, the 1-cup moka pot is a bad match for anyone who needs to make more than one cup of strong coffee at a time. It can be difficult to serve coffee to guests if this is your only means of making coffee.The 3-cup Moka potThe 3-cup size is another strong contender for "best size moka pot for one person." It makes about 200 ml or 6½ fl oz of coffee, and at 16 cm or 6 inches tall, it doesn't take up that much more space than the 1-cup.If you drink more than one cup of coffee a day, this is probably the best size for you.Check this Bialetti - Moka Express Alpina. WOW - I'm definitely getting this one!This is also a good option for couples who like to have a cup of coffee together in the mornings.But if both of them like drinking more than one cup of coffee, a 3-cup moka pot may not make enough to keep them both happy and well-caffeinated.The 6-cup Moka potThe next level up is the 6-cup moka pot, which makes about 300 ml or 10 fl oz of coffee.This is probably the standard size Moka pot for more than one person, and definitely the best size of moka pot couples, especially if both of you enjoy drinking more than one cup a day. It may be too much for one person, unless you drink a lot of coffee or need to pull all-nighters on a regular basis.Be aware that the 6-cup moka pot takes up quite a bit more space. At 22 cm or 8½ inches tall, that may not seem like much of a difference, but some people find it difficult to store. This isn't a deal-breaker for everyone, since this is one of the more popular sizes of moka pot. But it is worth considering if you have limited space and don't need to make that much coffee every day.The 9-cup Moka potIf you have more than two coffee drinkers in your household, or if you enjoy having a few friends over for coffee on a regular basis, the 9-cup moka pot is a great choice.It is, naturally, a bit bigger than the 6-cup, standing at 25 cm or 10 inches tall, and it puts out a solid 550 ml or 18½ fl oz, which is a significant jump from smaller sizes.A couple of things to keep in mind, though. With the larger size, you not only get storage challenges, but it is quite a bit heavier. It also takes longer to make all the coffee, so you'll need to plan ahead if your household has busy mornings or if you are having people over for coffee.The 12-cup Moka potFinally, we have the big boy in the moka pot world: the 12-cup moka pot, which makes about 775 ml or 25 fl oz of coffee, and sits at about 29 cm or 11½ inches tall. Because of its size, it takes a much longer time to brew all of the coffee, and it takes up a lot of space.Like the 1-cup moka pot, the 12-cup size is pretty niche. Very few people will need a 12-cup moka pot, but if you need to pour up to twelve servings of coffee every day, or if you regularly host brunch or dinner parties, this is the perfect size for you.
